Teen Charged in Skip Day Shooting Acquitted; Second Teen Awaits Trial

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

One of the teenagers charged with shooting five other teens at a “Senior Skip Day” event at Schrom Hills Park in April has been acquitted. The second awaits trial this month.

The Senior Skip Day event on April 19 drew a crowd of hundreds of Prince George’s County Public Schools (PGCPS) students, from a variety of schools, who gathered at Schrom Hills. It ended with five students ranging in age from 16 to 18 taken to a hospital suffering from gunshot wounds, one in critical condition. All five recovered. (For more on the shooting see the April 25 issue.)

Ten days after the shooting, Greenbelt’s Chief of Police Rich-and announced the teenagers would be tried as adults for attempted homicide and gun-related charges. However, this fall their cases were both transferred to juvenile court. They were held without bond since their arrests cited public safety concerns.

Last week, the first of the two teens stood trial and was acquitted.

The Associated Press (AP) reports the acquitted 16-year-old’s attorney, Tom Mooney, said police placed undue focus on the teenager, who has not been named because he is a juvenile, and failed to pursue other viable leads. Complaining of “investigative tunnel vision” and professing his client’s innocence, Mooney said, “The presence of reasonable doubt played a crucial role in the verdict,” reports AP.

The Greenbelt Police Department stood by their investigation

Venturing Crew 746 Holds Annual Winter Wonderland

by Liz Murray

Venturing Crew 746, a co-ed Boy Scouts of America program for youth aged 14 to 20, is hosting the Fourth Annual Winter Wonderland on Saturday, December 7. In 2023, the event featured Santa and his firetruck, a lighted woodland walk, community groups’ winter-themed displays with activities and giveaways, model trains and hot cocoa with treats. This quickly growing annual tradition is an important fundraiser as well as a community event. The crew uses all proceeds to directly impact local teens by investing in equipment and youth leadership training opportunities and funding a crew scholarship to allow every youth to participate regardless of financial ability. The 2023 event saw over 300 guests enjoy live performances, friends around the campfire, visiting with Greenbelt fire and police personnel, Santa and the woodland lights. The 2024 event will be held from 5 to 8 p.m. at 40 Ridge Road and is supported by the Greenbelt Rotary and Mowatt Memorial United Methodist Church. Entry donations are requested. For additional information, contact Liz Murray, crew advisor at venturecrew746@gmail.com or visit the crew website at venturecrew746.org.

The SPACE Free Art For All Reaches Sixth Anniversary

by Lois Rosado

Shaymar Higgs’ goal was to arrange a three-week pop-up art space and to determine if it spurred any real interest in the community. With the support and assistance of Quantum Companies and its then liaison at Beltway Plaza, Kap Kapastin, Higgs gained free access to a vacant space. The demand was instantaneous, and the artistic resources and services expanded exponentially. For Higgs, The SPACE – (Sharing Positive, Artistic and Creative Energies), Free Art For All, is a creative place where the community can unite, heal and share, leading to self-discovery and transformation.

The concept for The SPACE Free Art For All evolved from the Peerless Creative Arts and Resources Center that Higgs and friends started in Clinton, Md. When he moved to Franklin Park and walked through Beltway Plaza, he saw individuals sketching and others just hanging around and realized that there was a need for a creative outlet in Greenbelt West. Most of the Greenbelt art and creative programs were centered in Old Greenbelt and many individuals lacked the financial means and/or

Carriers Bear Greetings

With a December issue, the Greenbelt News Review distributes an envelope that requests gifts for carriers. Envelopes are addressed to the carrier who delivers your newspaper. The return address is the News Review at 15 Crescent Road, Suite 100, Greenbelt, MD, 20770.

Write checks to the name shown on the envelope. We advise against putting cash in the envelopes given recent mail thefts, and against taping envelopes to your door for carrier pickup.

Envelopes can be delivered to the carriers three ways.

1. Hand them to your carrier.
2. Put a stamp on them and send them through the mail. To prevent mailbox theft, we encourage you to mail them inside a post office.
3. Drop the envelope at the News Review office at the address above.

Though carriers receive nominal pay each week, this extra token means a lot. Pay teaches them about money and the work ethic, and gifts show the additional rewards that come from taking pride in being prompt, organized and careful. Families with multiple routes find the income helpful. This is a first job for many carriers, and your gifts are positive feedback that helps them become productive adults.

All those distributing the paper have faithfully helped us get the paper out every week. Our circulation manager, Elizabeth Gardner, helps keep the whole process on track. Alan Burt is a key link who delivers newspapers to carriers and fills boxes and racks.

The holiday season allows all of us to appreciate and encourage our young carriers, and show understanding for any minor delivery problems that may have happened during the year. The News Review thanks everybody involved for doing a great job, caring about the community and braving hot, cold and wet conditions to bring residents their papers.

Letters to the Editor

Roberts' Response

I am writing in response to an article in the November 7 News Review, “City’s JEDI Team Calls for Action Over Council Member’s Behavior.”

First of all, if my comments about saving our taxpayers some money and educating our workforce offended some people, I sincerely apologize, as that is never my aim. However, as a councilmember, I have a job to do, and sometimes some people are not going to like your position, or what you have to say. With all due respect, the JEDI Team’s claim that I acted in a “disrespectful, demeaning and abusive manner to Deputy Chief Tim White and about the city’s Public Works Department” is absolutely false.

Anyone who reads the meeting transcript or watches the meeting video will see that all I did was ask questions and engage in a normal conversation, just as I would do with one of my customers or anyone else who has an interest in mechanical things! In fact, at one point I can be heard saying that “I am sure that our employees can do the job.”

A memo from city staff asking for $16,000 to replace an engine because of a check engine light stated in part: “Upon initial inspection by our shop supervisor

Register for the giveaway at wkf.ms/3CWvhjy. Further details regarding the event will be provided upon registration. Senator Washington looks forward to celebrating the holidays with all.

Bilingual Story Time At SHL Rec Center

On Friday, December 13 at 10:30 a.m. at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, RUAK (Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness) with the Prince George’s County Memorial Library System will present engaging, lively stories and activities for young children and their caregivers to help build early literacy skills. This monthly program is an introduction to reading aloud to children as a way to instill the love of literature. After the readings, the children can stay and play with balls in the gym. There will be free children’s books and free healthy, nutritious snacks. Come, and spread the word to friends and family.

Los Niños Leen y Juegan

El viernes 13 de diciembre a las 10:30 a.m. en el Centro Recreativo de Springhill Lake, RUAK (Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness) con el Sistema de Bibliotecas Conmemorativas del Condado de Prince George’s presentarán interesantes historias y actividades divertidas para niños pequeños y sus cuidadores, para ayudar a desarrollar las habilidades de alfabetización temprana. Este programa mensual es una introducción a la lectura en voz alta a los niños como forma de inculcar el amor por la literatura. Después de las lecturas, los niños pueden quedarse y jugar con pelotas en el gimnasio. Habrán libros infantiles gratis y aperitivos saludables y nutritivos. Como dijo un padre al irse, “Fue muy bueno!” Unete a nosotros, y corra la voz a amigos y familiares.

Golden Age Club December Plans

The Greenbelt Golden Age Club meets on Wednesdays at 11 a.m. in Room 201 of the Community Center. Because of the December holidays, the schedule for this month is different. Greenbelt seniors are welcome to come as a guest, then pay dues and join the club.

Remember, the club does not meet when inclement weather delays or closes the Prince George’s County Public Schools.

December meetings:

- 11 – Bingo
- 18 – Holiday Luncheon (members only), each member attending must bring a food to share
- 25 – Christmas/Hanukkah, no meeting

Sparkle Mart Art & Craft Fair

More than 70 vendors will sell unique art and crafts on three floors of the Community Center between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Saturday and between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Sunday.

There will be food trucks outside the Ground Floor East entrance on both days, with indoor seating in the first floor dining room, and customers can enjoy live music both afternoons between 1 and 3 p.m. A youth craft fair will take place in Room 113 on Sunday only. For more information, visit greenbeltnmd.gov/arts.

On Friday Santa Lights The Community Tree

All are invited to Roosevelt Center on Friday, December 6 at 7 p.m. to welcome Santa, who will arrive on a fire truck to light the community tree. A musical performance by the Greenbelt Concert Band Brass Choir will herald Santa’s grand entrance. Complimentary treats and hot chocolate will be provided by Greenbelt Recreation. Immediately following the tree lighting, the Greenbelt Cinema will offer a free screening of How the Grinch Stole Christmas (1966).

A bit of Greenbelt history: The first tree-lighting ceremony in Greenbelt was held in Roosevelt Center in 1938.

Greenbelt Museum Holiday Open House

This Friday, December 6 is the Greenbelt Museum’s annual evening open house, Deco the Halls. Stop by 10-B Crescent Road to take a quick tour of the Museum’s historic house all aglow with vintage holiday decorations. The house will be open from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Admission is free and no pre-registration is necessary. If Friday won’t do, come by Sundays through December for a tour.

Greenbelt Chess Club December Meetings

The Greenbelt Chess Club will meet on Tuesdays, December 10 and 17. The meetings will take place at the Youth Center from 6:30 to 8:45 p.m. The club welcomes people of all ages and skill levels. Direct questions to greenbeltchessclub@gmail.com. To be added to the mailing list, go to tinyurl.com/ycy2nz4m.

Mahjongg Now Played Wednesday Afternoons

Want to learn how to play American mahjongg? Abby Crowley will offer a free four-week class beginning Wednesday, January 8 from 11:45 a.m. to 1 p.m. (Note that the Winter Recreation Guide lists an incorrect starting time.)

Those with some experience with American mahjongg are welcome to come play on Wednesdays from 1 (or sometimes earlier) to 4 p.m. (or whatever part of that time fits each player’s schedule) in Room 109 in the Community Center.

Register for either the class or to play at the Recreation Department office in the Community Center. Both are free.

Poetry in the Garden

The community is invited to join the poetry reading group on Sunday, December 8 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the clubhouse at Schrom Hills Park.

The topic will be poems for the holiday season and festivals. All are welcome.

Bring a personal poem to read or come to listen and enjoy the power of poetry. For questions, call Effie at 443-415-1053.

Breakfast with Santa

Greenbelt friends, neighbors, and children: come to the Greenbelt American Legion, 6900 Greenbelt Road, on Sunday, December 8 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. for a special breakfast with Santa. On the menu for breakfast are pancakes, eggs, bacon, sausage, muffins and a beverage. Children will have their picture taken with Santa and participate in an art and craft project. There is a small fee per ticket and children under 5 are free. Tickets are limited to the first 100 and may be purchased at the door. Both auxiliaries of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department and Greenbelt American Legion are proud sponsors of the first joint annual event.

Concert Band Hosts Holiday Spectacular

On Friday, December 6 at 7 p.m., enjoy the Brass Choir at the city’s Tree Lighting Ceremony at Roosevelt Center. And on Monday, December 9, the band will be performing at 7 p.m. at the Mormon Temple Visitors’ Center at 9900 Stoneybrook Drive in Kensington.

The Greenbelt Concert Band is a volunteer adult musical organization dedicated to providing quality musical performances for the citizens of Greenbelt, Prince George’s County and the surrounding areas. Learn more at greenbeltconcertband.org.

Our Neighbors

Condolences to the family and friends of Regina (Gina) Murphy. Gina had lived in Greenbelt since she was 4, when her parents, Charles and Gudrun (Gudi) Mills, moved to the city in 1966. Many Greenbelters were fortunate to interact with Gina regularly during her years working at the Co-op Grocery Store.

Sharp Greenbelt eyes spotted the photo of Greenbelt's first dentist, Dr. James McCarl, in last Tuesday's (November 26) Washington Post. The caption read, "A Maryland dentist treats a patient in the 1940s, when U.S. cities first put fluoride in drinking water." The photo was taken by Marjory Collins, who photographed everyday life in the early years of Greenbelt. The article was a brief history of fluoride, the discovery of its help in preventing tooth decay in children and efforts over the years to ban its use in municipal water supplies.

Tuesday, Dec. 11, at 7 p.m.

This special service offers hope and healing for those who find Advent and Christmas difficult. While the overall tone is one of meditation and reflection, it is not somber. The sanctuary is often softly lit, and participants are invited to light a candle in remembrance, honoring the life and memory of a loved one. All are welcome.

Worship Service, Sundays 9:30 - 10:30 a.m.

PROPOSED COUNCIL VACANCY PROCESS

The proposed Council Vacancy Process legislation will be introduced for a first reading on December 9. A public hearing on the proposed Council Vacancy Process will be held on January 13, 2025.

The Greenbelt Board of Elections has proposed two options for the Council to consider in the event of a vacancy on City Council. If "Option 1" is chosen, legislation will need to be drafted to amend the Election Code. Alternatively, if "Option 2" is selected, legislation will need to be drafted to amend the City Charter. Both options will follow the proposed timeline for filling the vacancy as follows:

1. VACANCY OCCURS (REASON: DEATH, RESIGNATION, INCAPACITY, OR FAILURE TO PARTICIPATE):

- Determine the timing of the vacancy in relation to the next election

2. MORE THAN 180 DAYS BEFORE NEXT ELECTION:

Special Mail-in Election:

- Candidates must file nomination papers.
- Ballots are mailed to voters.
- Voters have 30 days to respond.

3. BETWEEN 60 AND 180 DAYS BEFORE NEXT ELECTION:

Council Majority Vote:

- Seat filled by majority vote after a public hearing.

4. Within 60 Days of Next Election:

Council Discretion:

- The seat may remain vacant or may be filled at the Council's discretion.

5. SIMULTANEOUS VACANCIES:

- If three or more vacancies occur simultaneously, a special election is required.

PUBLIC STATEMENT REGARDING PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY FIRE/EMS SUMMER STAFFING PLAN FOR GREENBELT VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT

Greenbelt, MD - The City of Greenbelt is disappointed in the County's decision to reassign 24 career personnel from Greenbelt Station 835 on July 1, resulting in the removal of all career personnel from our Station. County Fire Chief Tiffany Green and County leadership ordered the redeployment of 55 career firefighters from Berwyn Heights, Greenbelt, Bunker Hill, and Bowie Station. We are gravely concerned with the impact in response times of emergencies in Greenbelt and our surrounding areas.

Greenbelt will continue to work in tandem with College Park and Berwyn Heights alongside County leadership in addressing our concerns and fighting for the City of Greenbelt.

Election Delays Spur Board of Ed “Power Grabs” and Legal Filings

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

The Prince George’s County Board of Education Annual Meeting was held on Monday, December 2. Maryland’s Educational Code stipulates that new board members’ terms begin the first Monday of December and at that meeting, the election of a new chair and vice chair takes place. However, the Board of Elections is still counting provisional ballots. In the District 8 race the difference between the two leading candidates in the unofficial results is 0.11 percent. While new members could not be sworn in, a disagreement erupted over whether or not to vote on chair and vice chair. Current Chair Lolita E. Walker (District 9) and Board Member Shayla Adams-Stafford (District 4) went head-to-head, each accusing the other of attempting a power grab.

Earlier Monday, three elected board members and three leading candidates filed a civil case in circuit court for a declaratory judgment against the Prince George’s County Board of Election Supervisors, Board of Education Chair Lolita Walker and the Prince George’s County Board of Education. Plaintiffs are board members Adams-Stafford, Brannndon Jackson (District 6) and Jonathan Briggs (District 2, which includes Greenbelt) and candidates (vote tallies unofficial) Tiffini Andorful (65 percent of District 1 votes), Phelton Moss (52 percent in District 7 compared to 48 percent for incumbent Kenneth Harris) and Zakyia Goins-McCants (who has a slim margin over candidate Angela Jones). The plaintiffs also filed a motion for a temporary restraining order.

At the meeting Adams-Stafford made a motion to postpone voting on officers of the board until the new members were sworn in. Walker noted there was no date for the new board members to be sworn in and so the postponement would be indefinite.

Briggs supported the motion to postpone in order to avoid disenfranchising new members. He noted that as Walker kept pointing to the law, the law also states the swearing in of new members should take place that day as well as the vote on leadership. Briggs believed the intent of the law was to have the new members vote on the leadership. He also noted precedent, saying the vote was taken later in 2022. (In fact, two years ago the board was gridlocked and unable to elect their chair until January 12; see the December 22, 2022 issue).

Student member Jamal Jongo wondered if the board even had a quorum, given new members had not been sworn in. “They’re not members of our Board of Education,” responded Walker. “They will be soon. However they’re not as of today, okay? They’re not ... we have members of our Board of Education that are sitting around today ... the law states that they will ... until the member’s successor is elected and qualified. This is following the law. That’s it. It just is. It’s not Lolita, it’s not any of that. This is the law, OK?”

“We’re really taking advantage of the fact that the Board of Elections is still counting ballots,” argued Adams-Stafford. “I’m very passionate about this because board members lobbied so hard to have the opportunity to vote for our own leadership because we all represent tens of thousands of people,” she said. “Our country prides itself on the peaceful transfer of power and really this is truly a repugnant power grab that spits in the face of democratic processes,” said Adams-Stafford.

“What is unfortunate is that we leverage this platform in front of our 133,000 scholars and 22,000 employees, [and to have it a] site of division that is totally unnecessary.... Unfortunately the words that we continue to spew is that we have elected members who are not able to vote and that is simply not true,” responded Walker, who cited the outgoing members around the table as fulfilling their duties until their successors are elected. “We are following the law contrary to what anyone wants to believe or what anyone wants to spew. This is the elected body that is here until we have elected and qualified people in place. That could be Thursday, that could be after such time. Until then we will continue to do the work of the Board of Education of which there is a lot of work to do,” said Walker. “I want folks to recognize where is the power that’s being grabbed,” she said.

The board eventually voted unanimously to adjourn until Thursday, December 5 at 5 p.m., before their next regularly scheduled meeting that same evening.

Briggs told the News Review that the Board of Education had previously planned to elect officers at the Thursday meeting but the board’s lawyers got involved when some discussed a legal injunction. The lawyers believed the annual meeting had to be held on Monday. Briggs lamented the fact that the lawyers hadn’t offered alternatives if necessary, in case the swearing in couldn’t take place. He firmly believes the intent of the law is to have the newly elected body vote on their chair and vice chair for the next two years (members serve a four year term with staggered elections every two years).

The restraining order is to prevent the chair from moving forward with a vote, if an agreement

CARES Needs Fund Donations

A recent poll shows that many persons do not have financial stability due to a lack of job security, no health insurance and decreased ability to save for a financial crisis.

The Greenbelt Emergency Assistance Fund continues to be that safety net for Greenbelters in a financial crisis whatever the reason. Those who are able can help by donating to the fund.

Make checks out to Greenbelt CARES, write Emergency Assistance Fund in the memo space and mail to Greenbelt CARES, 25 Crescent Road, Greenbelt, MD 20770 (or place in the secure drop box at that address). Or, go to GreenbeltMD.gov, click Pay Online at the top of the page and choose Charitable Donations.

to wait for new members can’t be reached in a “reasonable way,” explained Briggs. A judge has not yet ruled on the injunction, but it could be applied retroactively when they do, invalidating any election of officers that might take place in the meantime. The Board of Elections is named as a defendant in the case because they are in violation of the timeline and have caused the process to be delayed for the Board of Education, says Briggs. They’d like to bring attention to the consequences of the Board of Elections’ delay, he said.

Given the advice of the board’s lawyers to hold the meeting and vote, the News Review asked Briggs if he believes the move to do so was a power grab by Walker, as Adams-Stafford alleges. Briggs said that while he can’t speak to intent, he knows the chair to be a “rule follower.” However, the board’s attorneys don’t have authority over procedures but answer questions and provide advice, he stressed. Therefore he wouldn’t “put it on attorneys,” saying we all have deductive reasoning and critical thinking skills. He lamented the chair’s inability to think innovatively and consider all aspects, including past precedents so they could do things differently. “When I think of a leader I think of them making hard decisions and steering us ... I don’t think that’s what we saw,” said Briggs.

Briggs believes the Board of Elections will meet Thursday afternoon. It’s unclear how the divided Board of Education will proceed if new members can’t be seated at the second session of the Annual Meeting that evening.

A Greenbelt Artist Paints Greenbelt as He Sees It

by Penny Martin

A painting by Dave Campbell of a well-known Greenbelt spot is currently on display in the lobby of the Greenbelt Arts Center.

Dave Campbell, an artist and Greenbelt resident, is currently displaying some of his paintings in the lobby of the Greenbelt Arts Center. When Dave and his wife, Joyce, moved to Greenbelt seven years ago they found much to love besides good neighbors. With its woods, skies, houses, trees, sheds, gardens, parks, playgrounds and residents walking dogs, talking with neighbors or riding bicycles, he found his neighborhood to be a rich store of visual interest and meaning.

“As a landscape painter, I am more interested in portraying the ordinary, what I see every day on my walks, than I am in traveling to distant, exotic places to paint. I find that the same tree or house or street near home when seen often and at different times of the day or year can be a completely different sight. What is mundane or boring one time may be mysterious or beautiful in different light or from a new angle. I try to capture that subtlety in paintings and want to learn how to do it better.”

You too may have walked or driven past these views more than once. Come see how Dave Campbell sees them. The lobby at the Greenbelt Arts Center will be open before 8 p.m. performances on Saturdays December 7, 14 and 21.

Alsobrooks Heads to Senate; Candidates for County Exec Emerge

by Joan Estenson and Lesley Kash

As Angela Alsobrooks prepares to become a U.S. Senator from Maryland, she resigned as Prince George’s County Executive at 10 a.m. on Monday, December 2, barely beating the noon deadline allowing her to select the interim county executive. Chief Administrative Officer Tara H. Jackson will now step in as the acting county executive until a special election is held.

Angela Alsobrooks

County leaders are expected to pick a date for the special election soon, at least before December 12. The special election process is expected to take several months. The winner of the special election will serve out the remainder of Alsobrooks’ term – about two years.

In a news release Alsobrooks said, “Thank you for your trust and partnership as we worked to build a stronger, united Prince George’s.” She added, “Serving the residents of this county has been the honor of my lifetime, and I am deeply proud of all we have accomplished together.”

Three candidates have announced their intention to run for the position and a fourth is expected to announce soon.

Candidates Rushern Baker III

Former county executive Rushern Baker III is strongly considering running for the post he held from 2010 to 2018. He served as a member of the Maryland House of Delegates from 1994 to 2003. Baker took office when Prince George’s County was struggling in many ways and succeeded in creating jobs, reducing crime and increasing property values. His achievements led his peers to elect him to two terms as the chair of the County Executives of America organization. He unsuccessfully ran for governor of Maryland in 2018 and 2022.

Since leaving office Baker has launched a national leadership institute for local government chief executives in consultation with the University of Maryland School of Public Policy and the County Executives of America. Baker is currently the president and chief executive officer of the Baker Strategy Group, a consulting firm providing strategic operational solutions to public, private sector and nonprofit clients through the Washington, D.C., region.

Aisha Braveboy

Aisha Braveboy has been elected twice to the post of Prince George’s County State’s Attorney. Prior to that she was government affairs manager for Children’s National Health System, following four years in private practice. Braveboy’s first foray into politics was eight years in the Maryland General Assembly. She earned a juris doctor from Howard University Law School and a bachelor’s degree in political science and government from the University of Maryland.

Among her accomplishments as Prince George’s County State’s Attorney she created a Conviction and Sentencing Integrity Unit, the first of its kind in Maryland, and launched new countywide initiatives including the Prince George’s County Carjacking Task Force and Our Streets, Our Future. Should Braveboy win, a judge would appoint a replacement to serve out the remainder of her term.

Calvin S. Hawkins II

Calvin S. Hawkins II, is currently one of two At-Large Prince George’s County Council Members. He was elected in 2018 and reelected in 2022. He served as council chair in 2021 and 2022 and currently chairs the General Assembly Committee. Hawkins was a senior advisor to former Prince George’s County Executive Rushern Baker from 2013-2017. Should Hawkins become county executive his election would trigger a second countywide special election for his at-large county council seat.

Calvin Hawkins II

Jolene Ivey

Last month, Jolene Ivey won election to the at-large Prince George’s County Council seat vacated by the resignation of Mel Franklin. Ivey already chaired the county council and before becoming the at-large member, she was the District 5 County Council Member, elected in 2018 and reelected in 2022. She previously represented District 47 in the Maryland House of Delegates from 2007 to 2015. Ivey is vice-chair of the Planning, Housing and Economic Development Committee. A former broadcast journalist, Ivey is married to U.S. Representative Glenn F. Ivey (MD-4). If Ivey is elected, as with Hawkins, another countywide special election would be held to fill her at-large seat on the county council.

Farmers Market Season Closes; Final Holiday Hoorah Sunday

by Joseph Abelardo Conaty

As Farmers Market season comes to a close, vendors from a variety of businesses all came to the conclusion that this season was a success.

Sunday, November 24 marked one of the last opportunities to shop and mingle with vendors at Greenbelt’s Farmers Market, and, to Rodney Russell of Simple Pleasures, it meant the tail end of a 16th successful year at the market.

“Business is steady and I love being a part of the community,” said Russell, who expects Simple Pleasures to be back at next year’s Farmers Market. Russell noted that he fared a bit better during the summer markets, probably since his business sells mainly ice cream.

Another business that expects to return next season is Roy’s Kitchen, an Indonesian cuisine vendor that has been in business for seven years. According to Delia, who recently arrived from Indonesia to help with the family business, the Greenbelt community is friendly and loves stopping by.

Lynne Ferguson of Ferguson Family Farm described business at the Farmers Market as awesome. Ferguson Family Farm specializes in grass-fed beef and pasture-raised pork that tastes better and is more nutritious than standard grain-fed beef, according to Ferguson. “What you put out into the universe creates your future,” she said. “So if you say that business is doing well that’s what you’ll see if you put the work in.”

For some vendors, like Tae Gu Kimchi, which is a Black and Asian woman-owned business, this is one of many farmers markets they visit year round to promote their business. Tae Gu Kimchi can be found at 12 different markets in D.C. and three in Maryland, but they plan to return to the warmth and kindness of Greenbelt.

For others, Greenbelt Farmers Market is a place to test and expand their business models for the future. Melanie Parker, of Mel’s Munchies, is no stranger to farmers markets, at times going to a different one five days a week. However, Parker hopes to eventually evolve her business into a brick and mortar store. “If there’s a will there’s a way,” said Parker, who also said she is absolutely going to come back next year.

This year’s holiday market will take place on Sunday, December 8, which will mark the final market until next May. This last market will accompany the annual Sparkle Mart art and craft show held in the Community Center. Scott Fifield, president of the Farmers Market’s board of directors, told the News Review that they appreciate the synergy with Sparkle Mart. The Farmers Market fills their Holiday Market with their regular vendors rather than looking for others, glad to offer them a chance to reach a larger crowd, said Fifield. One exception is Ferdinand Loves Flowers, which is not a regular vendor but will be present at the Holiday Market selling wreaths, holiday arrangements and so forth. Amazingly, it is forecast to be close to 60 degrees on Sunday, notes Fifield, who hopes the market will benefit from the unseasonably warm weather in which people will be happy to walk around.

“Here, Kindness Is a Strength”: Generous Joe’s One Year On

by Randy Chow

As Roosevelt Center welcomes a new vendor at the New Deal Café, eagerly awaits the opening of Sunrise Caribbean in the space that was Beijing Restaurant for three decades and the Co-op Supermarket expands its offerings with smoothies, deli meals and café tables, two popular Greenbelt eateries continue: Cedars of Lebanon and the long-standing Generous Joe’s.

Generous Joe’s, originally named Greenbelt Carry-out, opened in 1966 and rebranded as Generous Joe’s in 1987. The “Generous” moniker was a reference to the size of the restaurant’s sandwiches. The “Joe’s” part was named after original owner, Joe Natoli Sr. (For more on the history of Generous Joes, see the July 6, 2023 and July 13, 2023 issues.) Last year, Aaron Mengel, who worked at Generous Joe’s for years, bought the restaurant, fulfilling his dream to own his own restaurant (see the July 20, 2023 issue). But the restaurant means more to Mengel than a place of business. It’s a place for community and togetherness.

“The reason why Generous Joe’s works is because of the community,” Mengel said. “There’s the kids that have grown up in Greenbelt.... I’ve tried to help them. ‘How’s school, how are your grades?’”

The 32-year-old added that he’s given kids free meals for honor roll grades. If he sees a child is struggling, Mengel will talk their problems out, whether it’s about their homework or home life.

Mengel, who came from a difficult upbringing in Baltimore City, said that in a tough neighborhood, kindness can be seen as a weakness. “Here, kindness is a strength,” Mengel said.

Linden Dirksen, 19, an employee at Generous Joe’s, said the restaurant supports families who bring children. “Aaron loves kids,” Dirksen said. “There’s an arcade machine in there. There’s a whole corner for kids to draw and color.... There’s so many friendly, fun things in there that really make it a family diner.” Mengel has also introduced Saturday morning cartoons.

Dirksen added that the restaurant’s environment is really personal and familial. “The vibe of Joe’s is very much like [a] small town, close community, but not closed off and unfriendly,” Dirksen said. “[It’s] very friendly and kind and warm and welcoming.”

Dirksen recommends asking for the white pizza, which isn’t on the menu. “You can get a white pizza, which is oil and oregano and salt and pepper and cheese,” Dirksen said. “It’s good. It’s really good.”

Mengel said an important part of his business philosophy is treating the staff and customers like they’re family.

Part of taking care of his family includes costly repairs. Mengel has spent tens of thousands of dollars upgrading and maintaining the restaurant since purchasing it. “I do that because if we’re not operating efficiently, we can’t give the best service to our customers,” he said.

A major challenge in owning and operating a restaurant, Mengel said, is dealing with inflation. The cost of ingredients has skyrocketed. “The food prices are incredibly high,” Mengel said. “There were times [when] you could get chicken breasts for $40, and it’d doubled to $80, tripled to $120.”

To contend with inflation, Mengel negotiated prices with food suppliers. By ordering less at a time from suppliers, the restaurant can cut down on waste, keep the menu price low and have fresher ingredients.

“All of the dough is freshly made every day, sometimes more than once a day,” Dirksen said. “Now that business is really picking up. It’s twice, or sometimes three or four times.”

The recent increase in Maryland’s minimum wage implemented one year ahead of schedule was especially difficult to manage, Mengel said.

In order to keep his fixed costs low, he saves money in other areas, such as preparing their own ingredients and not purchasing pre-made ingredients.

“We do everything we possibly can in-house, which saves us a lot of money,” he said.

No matter the financial challenges that are inherent in operating a small business, by prioritizing customer satisfaction and having a dedicated and hardworking staff, Generous Joe’s hosts a spot in the city where anyone is welcomed. “I’m so happy that we’re making it work,” Mengel said.

Found a Spotted Lanternfly? Photograph, Report, Kill Eggs

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

Lanternfly egg masses

A member of the News Review has recently spotted four spotted lanternflies in her yard and saw dozens of them at the base of Maryland Trade Center III (7501 Greenway Center Drive) in Greenbelt East on October 24. The State of Maryland asks the public to report such sightings but also requires a photograph so don't forget to snap a picture.

Killing Egg Masses

The spotted lanternfly lay their eggs in the fall and early winter. Though the adults will freeze to death during the winter, their eggs will survive and begin to hatch in the spring. Each egg mass contains 30-50 eggs and can be found on trees, fences, rocks, flat surfaces of outdoor furniture or equipment and wherever you spot the lanternfly. In order to destroy the egg masses, use a plastic card, like a credit card, or a putty knife and either apply pressure to pop them or scrape them off and drop them into rubbing alcohol or hand sanitizer.

About the Spotted Lanternfly

The spotted lanternfly (Lycorma delicatula) is a plant hopper native to eastern Asia. It was first detected in Pennsylvania in 2014 and has since been confirmed in Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia. It was discovered in Maryland in 2018, in Cecil County. It has spread to Allegany, Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Calvert, Caroline, Carroll, Charles, Frederick, Garrett, Harford, Howard, Kent, Montgomery, Prince George's, Queen Anne's, Talbot, Wicomico and Washington counties and Baltimore city.

Report Sightings

Report sightings of lanternflies at <https://tinyurl.com/yjs3bmuf> including a photograph with the sighting report. These data are important for tracking phenology and population levels.

From the University of Maryland Extension Service:

Don't panic. Spotted lanternflies are a nuisance pest in home landscapes. They do not bite or sting people or pets, they do not chew leaves and they are not wood-boring pests of homes or other structures. They do not kill trees but can cause stress on them, so best management practices in water management, soil health and correct mulching will go far to help keep plants healthy.

In residential yards and gardens, the recommended approach is to kill any spotted lanternflies that are safely reachable or to leave them for predators to feed on. Insecticide and other chemicals can harm non-target animals including pollinators and beneficial insects and will not effectively reach and kill all of the spotted lanternflies that are on the move. The insect is not harming landscape or garden plants enough to justify the risks of using insecticidal sprays. Do not spray home remedies such as white vinegar or dish soap because these items can harm other animals and plants.

County Council Votes for School Cellphone Ban; PGCPS Considers

By Anna Belford-Dillow

Last month Prince George's County Council passed a resolution encouraging the Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) to institute procedures to ban cellphone use by children in the public schools during school hours.

Calls for restrictions on cellphone usage in schools come in response to classroom distractions and concerns about student mental health, but also bullying and cyber bullying and the recording and sharing of school fights on social media.

The county's resolution, introduced by Wanika Fisher, follows similar legislative measures in other counties and states. In July this year Virginia Governor Glenn Youngkin issued Executive Order 33 establishing cellphone-free education in public schools in the state. Youngkin pointed to "concern over the alarming mental health crisis and chronic health conditions affecting adolescents, such as depression and anxiety, driven in part by extensive social media usage and widespread cellphone possession among children" and also the need to reduce students' time on phones without adult supervision.

"According to a survey conducted by the Capital News Service this fall, at least a third of Maryland school districts have tightened their cellphone regulations this school year alone," reported Sasha Allen and Audrey Keefe of Capital News Service.

Currently, PGCPS has a cellphone policy that is "very flexible" and allows administrators and teachers to implement it as it best fits their schools, said PGCPS School Board Member Jonathan Briggs, who represents District 2, including Greenbelt. In an email to the community on November 21, Superintendent Millard House II said, "Across the country and within our own community, cellphone use in classrooms has become a topic of significant discussion." Opinions vary widely, he wrote, and PGCPS will approach the issue collaboratively "with the well-being of our students and staff as our guiding principle." Eight middle schools and four high schools in the district are piloting "structured cellphone management strategies" that will help the system understand the impact of different approaches, House said in his email.

The district is now gathering input from the community and stakeholders on how they feel about cellphones in schools, revealed Briggs, who is chair of the policy and governance committee. He hopes the superintendent will then provide a report to the board on the insights gathered from stakeholders.

"It may look very different for a high school and an elementary," suggests Briggs. Teachers may want to use cellphones to complete exit polls from a class in high schools, for example, he suggested. Briggs also pointed to the need to consider enforcement and disciplinary measures that will come with new more restrictive policies or bans. "Policies are policies but what does that look like enforcement-wise?" he asked.

For PGCPS, action on cellphones will be based on what comes out of the report and the goal is to start with collecting information, said Briggs. The stakeholders from whom feedback is being solicited are principals, teachers, community members like parents, students and anyone else impacted, like paraprofessionals, school psychologists and counselors, he told the News Review. "I don't know if he's going to take a research-based approach," said Briggs, who suggested the superintendent may also want to include recent studies. Whatever changes the superintendent makes to administrative policy will need to be reflected in board policies, said Briggs, so there may be concurrent changes to those.

With regard to the county council's recent resolution, "This is really a values vote from the county council," said Briggs. The resolution calls on the school district to turn its attention to this issue, he explained. "One of the things that we really are calling for from our elected officials during this legislative season is board autonomy and the ability to steer the school district the way that fits best for Prince George's County, because every county's going to be different," says Briggs. "What we're really hoping for is that legislators will always allow us to kind of lead in that way because.... I don't think we want to be restrictive but we want to be responsive to what the data says and new insights that are coming out that are related to public health or overall what's effective in our schools."

Briggs also says they don't want to take away the flexibility that schools have under the current policy. "Where they can say this is something that will work for our teachers [or] student body," he notes, "that we want to continue to see as an opportunity for student academic performance or student engagement."

"There are so many unknowns because we haven't actually collected the information so it's too soon to say what it will look like and what's the right approach," he concludes. To the elected officials who have passed resolutions or executive orders, he says, "we hear them and we want to make sure that we're being responsive to this moment in time."

Eleanor Roosevelt High School journalists Haylie Martin and Melany Mejia Ibanez wrote in their recent report on the issue: "As students, we believe phones can be a distraction sometimes, but it all depends on how much we allow phones and social media to influence our lives, education and future. Though the cellphone ban can face much opposition from students and some parents, it is a step in the right direction for students' learning."

Federal Highway Administration (FHA), traffic calming concerns the “livability and vitality of residential areas and commercial areas through improvements in non-motorist safety, mobility and comfort.” American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) funds for pedestrian and bike improvements were used to pay for the study, and staff and the Advisory Planning Board (APB) worked closely with GPI on the study.

Specifically, the study focuses on the following roadways: Ridge Road from Lastner Lane to Westway, Lakeside Drive from Lakecrest Drive to Crescent Road, Lastner Lane from Ridge Road to Crescent Road, Greenhill Road from Crescent Road to Research Road and Hillside Road from Crescent Road to Research Road. The draft assesses 22 individual locations within these focus areas.

The metrics used in the study were: vehicle volume, vehicle speed and collision data. Using a point system for the range of data, an assignment of low, medium and high priority was assigned to each of the locations.

According to APB chair Ben Friedman, the impetus of the study began two years ago with an APB discussion concerning some serious accidents on both Lakeside Drive and Ridge Road, among other neighboring areas. Preceding this worksession, there had been an APB meeting and a community/public meeting in October (see the November 7 issue), where input was gathered for further iterations of the draft.

Council, staff and GPI all stressed that the study is still at the conceptual stage, with no firm details laid out as yet on actual construction or work schedule. The study outlines both short-term and long-term improvements with estimated costs. Hruby and Fearer pointed out that pilot projects will be the first steps, the effectiveness of which can be applied to other areas. Hruby stated that each improvement will engender its own engineering study.

The recommendations of the study include the following measures, in various configurations: removal of parking, additional sidewalks, curb bump-outs, raised and perpendicular crosswalks, new striping, speed bumps and rectangular rapid flashing beacons instead of traffic signals. Strevig pointed out that the lowering of speed limits is less effective for traffic calming than reorientation of the roads themselves and that road narrowing causes a more significant decrease in vehicle speeds. Strevig also said that public comment revealed a concern for areas of frequent road crossing without any traffic infrastructure. Measures like perpendicular crosswalks and bump-outs decrease the amount of time that pedestrians spend in the road crossing.

Hruby said that this is the first traffic calming study done for Greenbelt Center in 30 years. Other areas, such as Hanover Parkway, are still to be assessed, just not in this specific study, and staff continues to address traffic concerns as they arise.

Mayor Emmett Jordan stated that each location will need to be prioritized, based on factors like accident occurrence. Hruby said that much of the work will be done in tandem with other asphalt and concrete projects by the Public Works Department.

APB member Isabelle Gournay hoped for more connectivity within the city’s internal pedestrian network, providing more pedestrian safety.

Jordan and Councilmember Jenni Pompei expressed a need to factor in topography such as steep inclines and landscaping, as they affect line of sight and safety.

Jordan thanked GPI for its rigorous efforts. Using input from council, staff, APB and the community, GPI will prepare a final draft that can be presented to council for adoption. Jordan said that much is still “up in the air,” but that the draft was an “excellent overview” and that these improvements “could save people’s lives.”

City Notes

Community Center and Recreation staff processed a large volume of in-person and online registrants at the opening bell of winter recreation program registration.

Arts staff (and many other department colleagues) prepared for numerous holiday events including the Community Tree Lighting, Sparkle Mart, Snow Queen performance and the Winter Youth Musical.

Public Works installed holiday decor and equipment at Roosevelt Center and, at the Community Center, provided improvements and maintenance in Ground Floor East to facilitate the Sparkle Mart. Both the freezer and refrigerator in the commercial kitchen received service.

Code Enforcement inspected two medical offices and 17 rentals.

At the Aquatic & Fitness Center, staff completed cybersecurity training and collected Toys for Tots. Public Works repaired and replaced damaged ceiling tiles.

Park Rangers and Recreation staff supported the annual Gobble Wobble event.

CARES presented a holiday financial literacy class for 10 participants. The food distribution at Springhill Lake Recreation Center was attended by Diversity, Equity and Inclusion representatives.

Council Again Debates How To Fill Vacant Council Seats

by Michael Zelif

At the November 18 Greenbelt City Council meeting, members continued discussing procedures for filling vacancies on council. (For coverage of recent discussion, see the October 31 issue.)

The proposal under consideration was that the city’s charter refer to its election code for details on the procedures for filling a vacancy on council. Section 32 of Greenbelt’s election code stipulates, for example, that:

If three (3) or more council seats are vacant at the same time, the board of elections shall call at the earliest date a special election to fill said vacancies for the unexpired terms.

If the vacancy [of a single seat] occurs during the period after a regular election until 181 days before the next election, then it shall be filled by special election, by mail-in voting.

If the vacancy occurs more than 60 and up to 180 days before the next regular election, then councilmembers must fill it by majority vote, within 45 days.

In response to members of the Board of Elections and also to other councilmembers, Councilmember Rodney Roberts opposed placing the entire procedure in the city’s election code, arguing instead that placing it fully in the charter will more securely protect the right of Greenbelt citizens to petition for a referendum regarding changes to the rules governing elections.

Steven Gilbert from the Board of Elections pointed out that changes to the code as well as the charter require a public hearing, while Mayor Emmett Jordan and Councilmember Silke Pope noted that both charter and code allow for a referendum by citizens.

Resident Bill Orleans argued that a special election should be held to replace any number of vacancies up to 60 days before a scheduled regular election, to which Jordan warned that Prince George’s County may soon face the very expensive possibility of holding special elections to replace its county executive and then members of its council.

Resident Michael Hartman recommended that should three or more members of Greenbelt’s council need to be replaced, this should occur using the system whereby voters rank their choices among candidates to determine the new members, all of whom must receive at least 50 percent of the vote.

while acknowledging the court's decision. "The charges related to this case were brought after careful investigation by our officers, and we believe the case was thoroughly and fairly presented in court. However, it is the responsibility of the judicial system to determine guilt or innocence, and we honor that decision," wrote Bowers in a statement to the News Review.

"We understand that this outcome may be difficult for those directly affected by the incident and the community at large. The Department remains dedicated to investigating and preventing violent crimes in our city and will continue to work tirelessly to hold individuals accountable through proper legal channels," stated Bowers.

Asked about the implications for the trial of the second juvenile suspect, which is scheduled for this month, Deputy Police Chief Tim White said he couldn't comment specifically but had reason to remain optimistic that the suspect would be held accountable.

"Our thoughts remain with all those impacted by this incident. We will continue to collaborate with local agencies and community partners to promote safety and peace within our neighborhoods," wrote Bowers.

Mission
According to Higgs, the arts are the foundation of human connectivity; they create culture and help to bind community. The SPACE is about building human relationships and helping people see their potential as creatives, entrepreneurs and community leaders. His mission, according to a grant document, is to provide underserved communities with high quality art supplies, materials, skills, career development and individualized growth.

Programs
Community needs were revealed by the number of individuals who came to The SPACE. What Higgs had not anticipated was how The SPACE met the personal wellness needs of young people from the community. Youth came to find a safe place to learn, to relax, to meditate or just to rest. The programs offered include photography, painting and sewing. One goal is to show, especially young people, that they could use the Entrepreneur Lab (ELab), a new program, to be trained for marketable skills such as 3D printing, laser engraving, video production, AI arts creation and customized clothing with custom-designed vinyl transfers. Other offerings include free clothing and a book market.

Testimonials
Indalyn was your typical introverted, socially awkward teenager when she arrived at The SPACE which she says redirected her life’s purpose because Higgs had filled that environment with so much love and acceptance. He was able to help her see possibilities for her future that she had not considered before. Indalyn became serious about learning photography. For her, the growth of The SPACE means that anything is possible. Today, she is leading the new Aperture Crew Videography program, described below.

Sadibu, a work-study student at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, needed a service assignment but was rejected by every place he applied in Greenbelt. He saw a flyer for The SPACE and came to ask if he could volunteer. Higgs took him on as both volunteer and a mentee. Through the months and years that he spent with The SPACE, Sadibu became more confident and went from being a silent observer to a leader.

He has learned to use 3D printers and Tinker CAD, and created a pin in memory of former City Councilmember Ric Gordon. Sadibu plans to be a comic book writer and is developing his own comic series on a character called Young Blood. The first of two series are awaiting an official copyright letter and will be published in 2025.

Bob Rand, who joined The SPACE as a board member in November 2022, was inspired to support The SPACE by Higgs’ vision. He sees Higgs as an important local leader who knows how to create community where it is most needed and offer opportunities for personal discovery and growth. Rand loves being part of The SPACE crew helping the nonprofit grow, and looks forward to maintaining regular arts and wellness programming in 2025 and expanding the new Artrepreneur program.

Current Programs
Revolutionary self-care includes yoga and mindfulness. Classes are free to the community and include sewing, knitting, crocheting, ukulele, keyboarding, guitar, jam sessions to connect musicians, Friday night FAFA gaming and expressive art workshops.

A new workforce development center in the Third Space Lounge is partnering with the City of Greenbelt and Employ Prince George’s to offer support and training for career development.

Another program in the works is Aperture Crew Videography. Indalyn and youth interns from Kingsmen Academy in northeast Washington will run this program. Through Aperture youth make videos about the various types of work that are done every day in the community, and that help to sustain a city, allowing young people to see that there are all types of jobs in the community; however, to work one must be able to read, write, think and create.

The SPACE provides opportunities and hope for a better life.

The lives of local residents have been transformed through their association with Higgs and The SPACE.

it was determined that the issues exceeded our diagnostic capabilities.” I totally disagree with that statement. As a professional mechanic with over 50 years of experience, including 25 years running my own company, I know the importance of continuing education. I also know the difference between the cost of sending a vehicle to a dealer versus using your own labor. Let’s not forget that according to our city manager, we have a “three million dollar rolling budget deficit.” No one should be punished for asking, or even expecting, that our city employees be able to learn as they earn. I ask that everyone visit the city’s website, watch the meeting video or read the transcript and come to the city council meeting on December 9, and let the council know how you feel.

Rodney M. Roberts
Member, Greenbelt City Council

Roberts and JEDI Team

Rodney Roberts, like every other member of the Greenbelt City Council, is held accountable for his performance by voters in municipal elections every two years.

Now, according to the November 7 edition of the News Review, Mr. Roberts will have to answer to a higher authority: the Greenbelt Justice, Equity, Diversity and Inclusion Action Team (JEDI).

This body consists of 13 city employees representing each department in the city government. None were elected. None are accountable to Greenbelt voters. Yet JEDI appears to have taken on a self-appointed role to monitor, regulate and even police political speech in the Greenbelt City Council.

JEDI is calling on the City Council to “censure” Mr. Roberts for unspecified remarks at the August 12 council meeting and a council retreat two days later – remarks that the News Review characterized as “disrespectful and verbally abusive.” Hopefully the News Review can answer the following:

- What is JEDI, its role and mission?
- Who are its members and how were they chosen?
- When and how was JEDI formed?
- Was there a vote in the group to seek censure of Mr. Roberts? If so, who on JEDI voted for and against the decision?
- Does JEDI hold public meetings?
- Are minutes of meetings available to the public?
- Are meetings advertised on a city website, as with advisory boards?
- Since JEDI is composed of city employees, does the City Council have oversight of JEDI or does this responsibility belong to the city manager?

Hopefully, subsequent issues of the News Review can help shed some daylight on JEDI, an official policy advisory group of the Greenbelt city government that nevertheless operates in secrecy.

The city does have a “code of conduct” for council members, which the News Review also published. The code makes it clear that the council itself is responsible for enforcing the code. This is the council’s responsibility and not the job of unelected employees of the city government, who will never have to face voters.

Willis Witter

Editor’s Note: The JEDI team specified remarks in their memo and the characterization of those remarks was that of the team not the News Review, who reported on their memo in the November 7 issue. Several of the letter writer’s questions about the JEDI Team can be answered by reading the May 9 issue.

ERB Impartiality Concerns Raised

I am deeply troubled by the November 14 letter to the editor titled “In Defense of Roberts” by John Mason and Lolly Gaines. My despondency stems from their direct response, compounded by the fact that one of the individuals serves on the city’s Employee Relations Board (ERB).

The ERB’s primary functions include rendering decisions on employee dismissals, suspensions and demotions; hearing grievances and complaints from employees; and recommending policies and practices regarding appeals and grievances presented to the ERB. Prior to joining the board, members are required to sign a code of conduct, stipulating they must act with integrity, maintain impartiality and refrain from conduct that could tarnish the board’s reputation. They are also prohibited from engaging in behavior that may undermine the trust of employees or the public in the board’s ability to act fairly.

ERB members are expected to uphold these principles. However, the recent letter by Mason and Gaines raises concerns about the board’s impartiality. Having a member openly express support for a councilmember whose behavior and code of conduct are in question further raises concerns. While stating Roberts has “no polished oratory” and that “heated discussions are part of the job,” they also acknowledge that everyone has [done] “boneheaded things” in the past. These ideals are directly opposed to Greenbelt’s Community Pledge, which asserts that our “strength lies in diverse people living together in a spirit of cooperation.” How does this align with the aspiration to “be a respectful and welcoming community”?

In defense of Roberts, the use of the phrase “stupid is as stupid does” inadvertently highlights the very stance that the JEDI Action Team took to question his conduct: Actions should be the sole basis for judgment. Furthermore, “stupid is as stupid does” does not instill confidence in the ERB’s ability to maintain impartiality. Instead, it suggests that their actions and words may be influenced by personal biases or motivations and further undermines the trust of employees and the public in the ERB’s ability to act fairly and impartially.

This letter was submitted by a member of the JEDI team and city employee.

Reparations

A November 7 News Review letter writer cited his German-American abolitionist forbearers as reason to oppose reparations for descendants of slaves. Arguing that through hard work his family overcame hardships to build a better life, he draws a contrast to people whom he assumes are asking for handouts.

Although no doubt sincere, I question whether anyone succeeds without assistance, nor whether those whose forebearers were in chains are afraid of hard work. If African Americans hadn’t labored long and hard, their community wouldn’t have its current vitality; our country would be the poorer. Nonetheless, Black Americans on average earn less, own less wealth, and have a shorter life expectancy than those with European heritage – the reason the question of reparations is important.

My parents were refugees from Nazi Germany, my mother arriving in 1934, my father in 1938. They met through Nature Friends at Camp Midvale in New Jersey – German-American organizations with roots in the trade union and socialist movement. Although the surrounding town didn’t allow Jews or Blacks to purchase homes, Midvale had the first – and for many years only – integrated swimming pool in New Jersey. That’s where I learned to swim, learned the meaning of an inclusive culture.

We participated in annual Steuben Day parades in the Workmen Benefit Fund’s (WBF) contingent. WBF was a cooperative providing health insurance and old age services to members while advocating for national health insurance and improved Social Security benefits. Self-help in the community included working to improve the lot of all.

Similarly, I attended a turnverein in New York to learn German. The “Turners” imparted a democratic ethos contrary to the German imperial ethos that led to 1930s fascism. Reflecting that outlook, in 2017, Milwaukee Turners denounced the Trump Administration’s Muslim ban, recognizing in their plight the circumstances of impoverished or politically persecuted German immigrants in previous times.

I honor my heritage by respecting all cultures and valuing cooperation – and GHI, Greenbelt’s Food Co-op, New Deal Café and Greenbelt News Review. Discussions in our community about reparations reflect those values. Without genuine equality for all, no one’s rights are secure.

Before plunging to her death (just kidding!), Sarah Headley grabs her copy of the Greenbelt News Review in the Freakybuttrue Peculiarium in Portland, Oregon.

Mary Sies, Chris Stark and the News Review visited the Tom Petty historical marker at Tom Petty Park in Gainesville, Florida, November 19.

My Point of View

A Compliment; Some Musings

The News Review just keeps getting better and better, and the recent issue with its three main stories on the fire department, armory and lawsuit were well done – particularly the fact-checking of fire response times. The city is so fortunate to have such a vibrant newspaper in a time when so many other local papers have disappeared.

Comments

The city has taken on a real challenge with the Armory. It will be interesting to see what developments. A bond issue is something to think about but with the current political situation, who knows? I am of the opinion that CARES should have been moved out of the Municipal Building to the Community Center when it was first acquired. Planning should be there instead.

While there will be some demand, I feel the impact of the FBI on Greenbelt will not be that great. That was certainly so when Goddard came. Workers will commute, get off the Metro or park their cars and go inside. The FBI does not bring in subcontractors to seek out office space and whether enough out-of-town agents visit to support a nearby hotel is questionable. Beltway traffic will increase, but that will happen anyhow. It was the Beltway and Parkway that caused Greenbelt to develop as it has.

Way back I did a series of articles on maglev and concluded it was most likely that it would never be built. I see nothing to change my mind. I feel the developers are in for the government planning funding. It was true then and is still so now, I think, that there is not a successfully operating maglev train – the one in Japan is used for tourist rides and the one in China not reaching a good destination. But who knows what the future holds beyond January?

St. Hugh’s Catholic Church Hosts 2024 Empty Bowls Charity Event

by Christopher Irwin

The generosity of Greenbelt residents was on full display as 200 attendees of the 2024 Empty Bowls event came together at St. Hugh of Grenoble Catholic Church on Sunday, November 17 to raise funds in support of the church’s food pantry. By the event’s end, $6,000 was given toward the continued efforts of the church to meet the needs of the hungry in our area.

The Empty Bowls works were created by artists who donated their works for the public to purchase. Those bowls were then filled with various kinds of soup made by church volunteers. Adding to the event were performances by several groups, including the Greenbelt Orchestra's flute group, bassoon group and string quartet, and ukelele music from Zookulele Collective and Dave.

Among the attendees were Mayor Emmett Jordan and other Greenbelt city councilmembers. Their presence gave the occasion a special sense of recognition and support.

One participant, Mary Angevine, said, “I know that I made the right decision about coming when it was time to move to a new parish.” She described the people as “friendly” and “willing to put together these kinds of events for the parish.”

As an unforeseen consequence of her decision to attend, and a testimony to the charm of the moment, Angevine even encountered an acquaintance from her youth, her high school prom date. She expressed appreciation for how the event allowed her to get to know others rather than simply show up and return home once it was over.

Greenbelt Pottery Group potters Julie Boyton and Gina Mai Denn provided the bowls and partnered with the Ladies of Charity at the church, who coordinated volunteers to make the soups, desserts and provide the bread. The Ladies of Charity also handled ticketing and advertising for the event, assisted with seeking Greenbelt music groups to play and set up the decorations. Supporting the Ladies of Charity, the Knights of Columbus ran the kitchen and provided any logistical help needed, as this was the first time that Empty Bowls was held at the church.

Empty Bowls describes itself as a “grassroots movement by artists and craftspeople in cities and towns around the world to raise money for food-related charities to care for and feed the hungry in their communities.” Started in 1991 by Lisa Blackburn and art teacher John Hartom, Empty Bowls events have taken place in several states throughout the U.S. and many areas in Canada. The 501(c)(3) organization also partnered with the United Nations in conjunction with World Food Day. To learn more about this effort, visit emptybowls.com.

Greenbelt Buy Nothing Groups Gathered for Annual Social

by Erica Johns

About 25 members of Greenbelt’s Buy Nothing groups met for their annual social gathering on Saturday, October 5 at the Sweetgum Picnic Area in Greenbelt Park. On a morning that began slightly foggy but soon became sunny, items were swapped and donated; food and drink were brought, eaten and drunk; and more sharing ideas were discussed.

Buy Nothing is a grassroots movement to build community and reduce environmental impact. Members offer things they no longer need and request things they do need, with no money changing hands. Greenbelt has three groups: Greenbelt-Redbud, Greenbelt-Dogwood and one for Old Greenbelt. Greenbelt-Redbud and Greenbelt-Dogwood are available to any Greenbelt resident regardless of where they live in Greenbelt. The Buy Nothing

Old Greenbelt group is for those who want to give and receive within Old Greenbelt. All three groups operate on Facebook.

Member and organizer Melissa Ehrenreich wrote that sharing ideas discussed on October 5 included the following:

- 1) Highlighting free opportunities to share gifts of skills and time to explore building a more robust gift economy in Greenbelt.
- 2) Quarterly meetups to share arts and crafts to ensure free art is available to all.
- 3) Monthly wishes to pick a topic to collectively source mutual aid to address as a group.
- 4) A regional meetup to pull all Buy Nothing groups in the area together.
- 5) Encouraging and celebrating networks that build resilience (welcome to the neighborhood kits, wellness check-ins, dinner/court parties, etc.).

Greenbelt Buy Nothing members met Saturday, October 5 in Greenbelt Park for their annual social gathering. Items were swapped and donated, food and drink were brought, eaten and drunk, and more sharing ideas were discussed.
